

Message from Ani Halasz, Executive Director of Long Island Jobs with Justice:

Since our founding, Long Island Jobs with Justice has been steadfast in defending the rights of working people on Long Island. We have fought for better standards of living for working people, supported the rights of all workers to organize and bargain collectively, fought to protect workers and their families in the face of corporate attacks on their livelihoods, and mobilized our base of activists to join our growing movement for workers' rights and economic justice across Long Island.

We are overwhelmed by the strength, resilience and commitment harnessed by working people in the face of a global pandemic that has brought such devastation to our homes, communities and places of work. The moment has forced us to confront an economy that has grown less fair and less capable of providing a good life for people all around the world. Now, more than ever, we must ground ourselves in a commitment to foster solidarity across movements and working collectively to win victories for workers everywhere.

We have a long road to recovery ahead of us in the upcoming months, maybe even years, and we look forward to building together as community, faith and labor in our ongoing support and defense for workers rights and economic justice.

Wishing you and your loved ones a happy holiday season and a Happy New Year.
